The gist: Your character is responsible for the murder. This can be very stressful, but I have good news for you: there are other character(s) who may believe they are the murderer, or characters who have no incentive to solve the murder, so you're not alone in that regard (though, your character did 100% do it). Because of how the game works, you could even announce to everyone you're the murderer if you wanted to, and they'd still have to go to the trouble of proving it (idk if I'd recommend that though). Story-wise, Plunger9999 killed EvilGrungus in the Village at 6:00. They had suspicions that EvilGrungus was going to get everyone on the island killed, and felt that if they didn't act tonight, it would be too late.

Primary Objective (This is what you'll argue in your final Dossier): Make a case for why EvilGrungus deserved to die. [+10 Points]

Secondary Objective (You can score this several times, and doesn't need to be in your Dossier): For each person who cites supernatural forces in their Dossier, gain [+3 Points].

On the Front of the Shipwreck, the following symbol is etched in the wood:

There appears to be a similar glyph on the Bottom of the Shipwreck, but it's impossible to get a good look at it. To complete this quest, draw the symbol on the Bottom of the Shipwreck. Hint: find other clues on the Shipwreck to deduce the missing symbol.

When researching Loveland Harbor before moving here, you had come across rumors of the island being haunted; you hadn't taken it seriously then, but are starting to believe some extra-ordinary Something is on the island with you. Figure out what is lurking on the island with you to complete this quest.

Hint: doing some digging into the Island's name (past and/or present) will be extremely helpful.

Plunger9999 - Side Quest

Rudimentary crop circles were made by the island's previous inhabitants. Answering the questions below can give you an idea as to the shape of them, now long-overgrown.

Who thinks they are the murderer?

Charizard_Kid_2012 b0mb_thr3at

RodentGaming49 everythingisfine

What scheme was EvilGrungus up to before even coming to the island?

Nothing Crowdfunding scam

Phishing the elderly Car theft

What superstition do those on the mainland hold about Loveland Harbor?

Haunted Former settlers bring plague

Magnet for evil Portal to Hell

What murder weapon did you use?

Big rock Wrench

Gun Bare hands

Present your host proof of this quest's completion and get it stamped before opening.

Ok Plunger9999's side quest should've been getting 2 questions correct and even that's asking a lot as most of those require exactly one specific clue. The initial idea was that each question would have a sigil to go along with it, and getting all 4 components would draw something really fancy, but the symbology conlang didn't manifest properly, oh well.

Also, for the 2nd main quest, I kind of forgot most people aren't aware of cryptids lol. I genuinely was calling it "the murder mystery" all year and not Murder at Loveland Harbor cause I thought people ahead of time would be like "oh like the Loveland Frog right is this about the Loveland Frog". Overthinking, yay!

Nice work! After comparing symbols around the island, you've come to the following conclusions - Each symbol is made up of 5 connecting parts: North, South, East, West, and Center. - The Center part reflects the subject of the symbol. - The South part reflects some effect or function of the symbol on the subject. - The East part reflects a relative direction. This is not a Clue and cannot be traded or taken.	Upon a cursory analysis of these symbols, it seems that each is made up of connecting modular sections, the shape and location of an individual icon affecting the overall meaning. This is not a Clue and cannot be traded or taken.

The gist: Feeling pushed out of a group they created and envious of the progress made without them, your character poisoned EvilGrungus, delivering a lethal thermos of coffee to the Lab in the early afternoon of October 30th. This can be stressful, but I have good news for you! There may be another character who thinks they are the murderer, or characters who have no incentive to solve the murder. If others ask, you can tell them your objective is to investigate the murder, which is true in a sense, lol.

Primary Objective (This is what you'll argue in your final Dossier): Make a case that argues for your innocence [+10 Points]

Secondary Objective (You can score this several times, and doesn't need to be in your Dossier): When you announce to the group (or at least most people) juicy gossip in the interests of public education, gain [+1 Point] if it was true. Please write down somewhere the claims you've made so at the end of the game I can confirm which are true. Feel free to spread lies too, you just won't get points :)

If a proper autopsy is done by the authorities, they'll be sure to discover that EvilGrungus was poisoned. To cover your tracks, the first order of business will be to find supplies to make a post-mortem antidote or flush the body with fluids.

Collect 6 clues bearing chemical ingredients to complete this quest. Many clues pertaining to chemicals or liquids have letters hidden under red scribbles, each letter pertaining to a different "ingredient" found in the compound. Ingredients may be hidden in other ways, so keep an eye out.

With a tiny laboratory now in your pocket, you need to discreetly grab a blood sample from the body.

To complete this quest, you'll need to get your host alone for 60 seconds (I'll set a real-life timer). Be warned that anyone who passes by will be given a very incriminating Clue, as their character has seen you tampering with the body.

At the end of the 60 seconds, your host will stamp this envelope and you may open it.

- Find a working computer/device that the photographs can be loaded on to.

The gist: Your character might be the murderer; they had blacked out from a mysteriously fermented drink, and awoke with quite literally a smoking gun in their jacket. Your mission is somewhat of a balancing act, trying to get away with the crime if you did it, and trying to solve it if you didn't. You're able to collect more Clues by making information about your character public, but this will, generally speaking, further incriminate you. I've purposely set your character up this way so that if the idea of being the murderer in a game like this makes you anxious, you can just operate under the assumption that you're innocent until proven otherwise. Perhaps EvilGrungus died some other way!

Primary Objective (This is what you'll argue in your final Dossier): Determine whether you are the killer [+8 Points]. If you ARE the killer, [+4 Points] for making a case that argues for your innocence. If you ARE NOT the killer, [+4 Points] for making a case that shows who really killed EvilGrungus.

Secondary Objective (You can score this several times, and doesn't need to be in your Dossier): At any point, you may put one of your Testimony Slips (no duplicates!) in the public information pile; everyone can see this information and cite it in their Dossier. When you do this, gain [+1 Points], and take a random Clue from the Evidence Locker.

There's something else; a dream you just woke up from, a vision perhaps? You can remember a face but the specifics are foggy. To complete this quest, take a selfie with (or just take a picture of) 6 other people. Group shots are okay but only count as 1 photograph.
These people MUST consent to being photographed, no creep shots. Please be normal about this. You do not need to let people know this is for the murder mystery, however. You can get creative.

The gist: Your character is an aspiring mystery novelist, and thrilled to have a real-life murder on their hands to solve. They're pretty straightforwardly focused on solving the whodunit and are rewarded for making sense of the whole chaotic mess. Have fun! :D

Primary Objective (This is what you'll argue in your final Dossier): Make a case for who killed EvilGrungus [+10 Points]. Half points if you got the right person but lacked real evidence, or if you made a logically sound case against the wrong person.

Secondary Objective (You can score this several times, and doesn't need to be in your Dossier): For each Primary Objective of another player you correctly determine, gain [+2 Points]. If you correctly determine their Primary and Secondary Objectives, gain [+3 Points] instead. Please write your final guesses down somewhere so it's easy to mark whether they were correct at the end of the game. When it's time to read out the final Dossiers, you'll go first, so you'll make all your guesses, then as others present you'll see which were right.

MarkWahlbergOfficial - Main Quest 2

You're getting closer to the answer! An important part of sleuthing is to abandon all previous assumptions; let's abandon the assumption that the only way around Loveland Harbor is the clearly marked trails. To complete this quest, prove that at least one of the following means of travel is possible and/or has been used. (Meaning: of course you can hypothetically swim in any body of water, but is there substantial reason to believe someone could or did sneak around the island by swimming?)

1. Swimming around the island
2. Taking a shortcut through the woods
3. Soaring in a hang glider over the trees
4. Crawling through underground tunnels
5. Casting a magic spell to teleport

Wait a minute, who made the call to the police?? Most cell phones on the island are dead or get no service, and nobody has reported seeing someone alert the authorities. Even if this doesn't help catch the murderer, it'll be one less loose thread left hanging. To complete this quest, identify the person who reported the murder.

The gist: Your character is not the murderer, but is trying to work this fiasco into personal profit. They were already planning on the community to fall apart and had a secret deal with Netflix to produce a documentary when it inevitably collapsed, but the murder has kicked your plans into overdrive, scrambling for the materials for a good True Crime doc. You were the one who called the police, in an effort to come out of this mess without being an accessory to murder.

In your bag is a magnifying glass, be on the lookout for any Clues with consecutive 0's (i.e. 400 or 003), as they have special information if you look closely. Tiny text or secrets may still be hidden elsewhere, so keep an eye out :)

Primary Objective (This is what you'll argue in your final Dossier): Make a convincing case for who the murderer is [+6 points], this doesn't need to be the actual killer, it just needs to make for interesting TV. Gain an extra [+6 Points] for chronicling the final day in EvilGrungus' life.

Secondary Objective (You can score this several times, and doesn't need to be in your Dossier): For every Clue in your possession that belongs to EvilGrungus or contains their handwriting, gain [+1 Point]. These souvenirs will be sold online to the highest bidder when your documentary becomes a huge hit, and cannot be part of your Dossier, as all of that will eventually be confiscated as evidence.

Testimony Information

The below information is also contained in your collection of Testimony Slips. When others Extract a Confession from you, you'll be giving them one of these bits of info. It's all true (including your Alibi).

Alibi: everythingisfine and I arrived at the Lighthouse at 6:30, leaving from the Beach. I left a few times to collect firewood but was never absent for more than 15 minutes.

Secret: I've been getting food delivered in secret as I didn't want to share or lose my regular rations.

Secret: I've gotten a little carried away in my surveillance of the island, and am feeling guilty about it.

Lore: I can run really fast.

Lore: My handwriting is terrible.

Lore: I'm a terrific marksman.

Relationship: EvilGrungus and I were best friends.

Relationship: Peptomancer and I have binge-watched Black Sight literally dozens of times.

Relationship: everythingisfine makes a nice living as an influencer due to my management.

RodentGaming49 - Main Quest

On various photos, posters and wall art within the apartment, there are tiny letters. To complete this quest, find all 6 hidden letters and unscramble them.

__ __ __ __ __ __

Present your host proof of this quest's completion and get it stamped before opening.
In case it isn't clear what you're looking for, I'll give a freebie; one of the letters is on the Owego strawberry picture in the kitchen, in the bottom left-hand corner.

SHADOW

RodentGaming49 - Main Quest 2

During your stay on the island, you had several clandestine meetings with your producer from Netflix (who also was the one to smuggle you food). A question had been put to you several times: what's your angle on the story? Now with an actual murderer on the loose, it's time to decide how your documentary will tell things: Was EvilGrungus a benevolent saint, cut down before achieving their magnum opus? Or were the Terrestrials of Loveland Harbor terrified prisoners who finally took up arms against their overlord?

To complete this quest, collect 3 Clues that suggest the "fallen paradise" story, AND 3 Clues that suggest the "escape from a cult" story.

Present your host proof of this quest's completion and get it stamped before opening. You'll then choose which set of 3 Clues to keep, and which set of 3 Clues go in the Evidence Locker (effectively burning the material contrary to your story).

Confidential! You cannot show others this envelope, though you may talk/lie about it.

RodentGaming49 - Side Quest

You've already had some recording devices set up on the island, but with everything thrown into disarray it's time to kick things into overdrive to get as much content as possible. You'll need to covertly install some microphones to pick up on any incriminating details as people rush around the island tonight. Attached to this Quest envelope are 4 Clues sealed with stickers (do not open these). Your goal is to hide each of these Clues (representing microphones) in a unique room in the apartment. You can consider the kitchen and living room as separate rooms. Once in their location, you cannot move or take these Clues (which, if discovered by other players, will provide them incriminating info against you, so hide them well).

Present your host photographs of each Clue in its location and get this quest stamped before opening.
Hint: You might want to consider WHEN you hide these Clues. As I have not playtested this I can't say quite how it will shake out, but I expect the beginning of the game will see everyone tearing up my apartment, so I feel like it might be safer to hide these Clues once things settle down. Up to you though! :D

Nice work completing your main quest! It seems the only thing left to complete your documentary is a catchy title. When you present your case at the end of the game, get [+2 Points] if you give your story a fun and creative name ("Murder at Loveland Harbor" is already taken lol)

This is not a Clue and cannot be traded or taken.

With these microphones set up, you're privy to all sorts of secret information! For the rest of the game, whenever someone Extracts a Confession from you (giving you two Clues in exchange for one of your Testimony Slips), after you put one of those Clues in the Evidence Locker, you may take a random Clue from the Evidence Locker.
Get your host to open the Evidence Locker and shuffle the Clues for you to ensure you get a random one.
This is not a Clue and cannot be traded or taken.

The gist: Your character is a bit silly and I hope you have fun with them. You are not the murderer, but you do have a secret reason for being on the island with everyone; your character got it into their head that they needed to become a "freelance IRS agent", and is at Loveland Harbor to expose cases of fraud and theft in the misguided search for fame, profit, and most importantly, employment. While officially a member of the group, you're all but a stranger to them and prior to moving to the island had never really met face-to-face. So as a heads up, none of the other characters have information in their "Relationships" section about you, as they don't know you. You've also got a code wheel in your envelope, more details about that on the back of the wheel.

Primary Objective (This is what you'll argue in your final Dossier): Make a case that implicates others in financial crimes, gain [+4 Points] for each money-related crime that you can pin on someone. Additionally, gain [+2 Points] if your case correctly identifies the murderer.

Secondary Objective (You can score this several times, and doesn't need to be in your Dossier): Gain [+1 Point] for every person who is willing to write you a letter of recommendation for a job or be a reference on your resume (have them write this in your journal).

Secret: I have never been able to hold down a job for more than a few days.

Two other players have a sign and countersign (a secret phrase and response phrase) for their quests. You know the proper response of “recent events excluded, of course” but do not know the initial sign. If you’re able to intercept the phrase, the signaling player will let you know you can open this envelope. The other two players both know that an imposter will attempt to intercept the phrase, but they do not know it’s you.

Great work! I hope you found that last quest fun and not frustrating. Because your code wheel is quite literally three Caesar Ciphers in a trenchcoat, it's vulnerable to the same weaknesses, where long messages can be cracked by looking for the most frequent letters (T, E, spaces, etc) and intuiting the code. And if you used a consumable clue to open this bag without cracking the code, that’s how you do it!

The gist: Your character is not the murderer, but they have flexible ethics and are incentivized to help out multiple people to achieve their own goals. This serves the dual purpose of getting you much more information as you play all sides against one another, and hopefully helps the game run smoother as you have a reason to assist anyone who might be feeling stuck.

Whenever someone gives you a Clue or Testimony free of charge (i.e. not traded or taken) you may choose to make them your current Ally, there is an "Allies" card in your envelope that explains this rule further.

Primary Objective (This is what you'll argue in your final Dossier): Make a case that supports the story of your current Ally at the end of the game [+9 Points]. Additionally, gain [+3 points] if your case correctly identifies the murderer. You'll present your final Dossier at the same time as your current Ally, and can give your case alongside/after theirs.

Secondary Objective (You can score this several times, and doesn't need to be in your Dossier): For each of your former Allies who achieves their Primary Objective, gain [+2 Points]. The same character can have been your Ally several times over the course of the game, but you can only score this Objective once per person.

Peptomancer - Main Quest

There's another character on Loveland Harbor who's trying to get in touch with you discreetly, and in your prior messages has remained anonymous. You have the sign (secret phrase) of "Marvellous island, isn't it?" and they have the countersign (response phrase) of "recent events excluded, of course". Be warned though, there is an imposter player who also knows the countersign.

When you receive the countersign, if you believe the other player to be legitimate (or just don't care), you may inform them that you have both completed your quest; you two may open your associated envelopes. The other player with the countersign (whether real or imposter) won't be able to complete their quest normally, although there are Consumable Clues that will allow them to complete an otherwise failed quest.

AND the reward for this for Pepto is that specific Consumable so they can trade it.

The gist: Your character has always been down on their luck, but this is your chance to come back! While you didn't kill EvilGrungus, their death has been a blessing in a sense; since you're their nearest living relative it only makes sense that you should inherit the island and take charge from here, right? The only problem is those pesky cops arriving in three hours, and everyone accusing each other of murder and whatnot. If you can only get everyone to set aside their differences and protect ~~your~~ everyone's land with lethal force, everything should work out perfectly. For you, at least.

Primary Objective (This is what you'll argue in your final Dossier): Make a case that argues for why everyone should stick together on Loveland Harbor and continue this attempted utopia. Specifically, gain [+6 points] if your case shows that you are the new rightful owner of the island, and
[+2 Points] if your case argues why the island still has potential and is worth defending, and
[+2 Points] if your case explains how the community can move past their differences and learn to work together again.

Secondary Objective (You can score this several times, and doesn't need to be in your Dossier): After you present your Dossier at the end of the game, your host will call for a show of hands of how many people are willing to fight to remain on Loveland Harbor. Gain [+1 Point] for each supporter; if they have a Consumable Clue that is unused (effectively, a weapon), gain [+2 Points] instead. While the final show of hands is all that really matters, you have an unofficial petition in your envelope to gauge support, if you'd like.

Charizard_Kid_2012 - Main Quest

Let's not fool ourselves here; there's no way EvilGrungus actually left Loveland Harbor to you in their Will. Fortunately, we can change that. To complete this quest, create a forged will by doing one of the following:

- Collect 3 clues containing EvilGrungus' handwriting, OR
- Find a character skilled in forgery and get them to write a note reading "I will forge a document for Charizard_Kid_2012", OR
- Find a Clue regarding forgery services

Present your host proof of this quest's completion and get it stamped before opening.
Caution: while completing this quest will tell you where you can find the actual Will so you can swap it out with the forgery, it already exists in the apartment (though well-hidden). I'd recommend you move quickly on this task so that the real document isn't discovered before the switcheroo.

Confidential! You cannot show others this envelope, though you may talk/lie about it.

Charizard_Kid_2012 - Main Quest 2

With the forged Will in hand, all you need to do now is make the switch and the island will be yours with none the wiser. To complete this quest, collect the real Will, and have the fake one be "discovered".

Present your host proof of this quest's completion and get it stamped before opening. While you can be very blatant in doing this, being the one to find the document claiming you own the island will likely arouse suspicion. Some subtlety might be useful in this matter, which is why you've been given a generally-useless clue hinting towards the Will's location, so you can potentially guide someone else there after the swap.

Charizard_Kid_2012 - Side Quest

Rumor has it that the previous settlers of Loveland Harbor left more behind than smelly old ruins. Spending your precious time searching for hidden antiques would be a risky bet, and you haven't the best luck with bets lately. But isn't a broken clock right twice a day? To complete this quest, gather 3 CLues consisting of historical relics which were formerly buried.

Present your host proof of this quest's completion and get it stamped before opening.

Charizard_Kid_2012's Petition

(not legally binding)

I hereby pledge my support to remain on Loveland Harbor, come hell or high water.
Signed,

This is not a Clue and cannot be traded or taken.

The Will is located in the pantry, in the bottom of the bag of rice. Like, way down. Please wash your grubby hands before rooting around in there lol. Also, just a reminder that you don't need to hide the fake Will in the same location if you don't want to.

This is not a Clue and cannot be traded or taken.

Allies

(After someone gives you a Clue or Testimony slip for nothing in return, you may choose to become Allies with them. If you do so, you must show them this card)

Peptomancer is now your Ally and has a mechanical incentive to help you achieve your Objectives. While you are Allies, Peptomancer may not Extract a Confession from you or use a Consumable Clue on you (though you may do so to them).

Peptomancer can only have one Ally at a time, and does not have to inform you their Ally has changed, but they must reply truthfully if you ask whether you're still Allies.

This is not a Clue and cannot be traded or taken.

The gist: Your character isn't caught up in the petty power struggles and bloodlust of the rest of your compatriots. You're embarked on a crucial scientific endeavour. While you have nothing to fear from the impending arrival of the authorities (being innocent of any murder), they'll certainly interrupt your research of Loveland Harbor, so you'll need to justify why a conservation effort is necessary to prevent any (further) contamination to what might just be the most ecologically and anthropologically fascinating square mile of the planet.

Primary Objective (This is what you'll argue in your final Dossier): Make a case for why Loveland Harbor should be protected for further study (with you leading the effort, of course). Specifically, gain

[+4 Points] for evidence of unique flora and fauna

[+4 Points] for evidence of unique geological properties

[+4 Points] for chronicling the rich history of human habitation on Loveland Harbor.

Lastly, gain [+2 Points] if your case identifies the killer. If you've got some spare time on your hands, it can't hurt to assist the authorities, as long as it gets them off the island quicker.

Secondary Objective (You can score this several times, and doesn't need to be in your Dossier): Gain [+1 Point] for every 5 Clues you discover, rounding up. Keep a tally in your provided journal, your phone, etc. so we have a count at the end of the game. This is only for Clues that you discover, ones in the apartment and not already contained in your character's envelope.

Testimony Information

The below information is also contained in your collection of Testimony Slips. When others Extract a Confession from you, you'll be giving them one of these bits of info. It's all true (including your Alibi).

Alibi: I entered the Shipwreck to do research around noon and didn't go outside until I left for the Lighthouse. Plunger9999 was nearby, but too scared to go inside the wreck. I headed to the Lighthouse a bit before 8:00, and though I heard the gunshots I didn't think anything of it.

Secret: I can forge documents and imitate handwriting, and have used these talents for less than pure motivations in the past.

Secret: I went to culinary school. I do a bit of cooking for everyone on the island, but if I told them my background, I'd be relegated to Dedicated Chef.

Lore: I'm into the occult as a hobby, but I don't believe in the supernatural. Voodoo dolls just look cool, ok?

Lore: I've lived in Maine my whole life, but within the state I've traveled quite a bit.

Lore: I'm part of a different group that does annual Civil War reenactments each November.

Relationship: Charizard_Kid_2012 was the worst student I ever had in a class.

Relationship: EvilGrungus never had my respect, they were an obsessive TV fan and fake intellectual.

Relationship: MarkWahlbergOfficial and I got married a month ago.

_pyramidAura444 - Main Quest

It appalls you to see others treat the specimens on this island with such carelessness! Clearly, your indefatigable intellect allows you to see minutia others pass by. To complete this quest, collect 6 Clues with hidden UV markings on them.

Present your host proof of this quest's completion and get it stamped before opening.

Confidential! You cannot show others this envelope, though you may talk/lie about it.

_pyramidAura444 - Main Quest 2

There are strange bones scattered in subterranean passages under the island; are they really random remains, or could there be a pattern pointing to something more significant? Time to get your hands dirty and crawl through some tunnels. To complete this quest, you'll need to follow a hidden UV trail. Each hidden arrow points towards the next marking to a final "X" destination. The start point for your trail is on the apartment's entry door.

Present your host a picture of the "X" at the end of the trail and get this envelope stamped before opening.

Note that there are red herring arrows and X's to prevent you just skipping to the end and looking for an "X".

Confidential! You cannot show others this envelope, though you may talk/lie about it.

_pyramidAura444 - Side Quest

Given the time constraints, it's unrealistic to compile a complete taxonomy of all life on Loveland Harbor by midnight. That won't stop you from trying, though. To complete this quest, you'll be doing a process-of-elimination in determining what is or isn't living on Loveland Harbor. When you discover a clue about ANY entry in one of the below rows, cross the entire row out. When you're left with one un-crossed-out row, the quest is complete.

A.	Marigold	/	Atlantic Sturgeon	/	Leopard Slug
B.	Oak Tree	/	Fox	/	Eastern Cottontail
C.	Sphinx Moth	/	Brown Bear	/	Rose
D.	Juniper	/	Canada Lynx	/	Pigeon
E.	Lake Trout	/	Bark Crab Spider	/	Tomato

Present your host proof of this quest's completion and get it stamped before opening.

The gist: Your character isn't just solving the murder, they're going to crack the case of the century! The prestige and fame that comes with the title "greatest detective of all time"... sounds nice, doesn't it?

Your objectives are geared towards the quantity of crimes you can pin on the same person, rather than actually being correct. I encourage you to find the real murderer, of course, but if you can find a good suspect who committed a litany of smaller crimes, whose to say they didn't also do the murder?

Primary Objective (This is what you'll argue in your final Dossier): Make a case that argues for why the person you accuse is the murderer [+6 points]. (again, you can score this even if your suspect is innocent). Additionally, gain [+3 Points] for each additional crime that your evidence suggests the suspect is guilty of.

Secondary Objective (You can score this several times, and doesn't need to be in your Dossier): Every time you use a Consumable Clue (a Clue with an in-game mechanical effect, it will be clearly labeled as such), gain [+1 Point]. Your character is not here to play nice, and will gain their evidence by any means ~~entertaining~~ necessary. (Please keep a record somewhere of this so we have a final count at the end of the game, thanks!)

Testimony Information

The below information is also contained in your collection of Testimony Slips. When others Extract a Confession from you, you'll be giving them one of these bits of info. It's all true (including your Alibi).

Alibi: I was at the Beach all evening, except for the trip I took to visit the Lighthouse from 6 to 8. When we heard shots, b0mb_thr3at and I went together to The Lab to investigate.

Secret: I have a crush on Plunger9999 but would rather die than do anything about it.

Secret: My phone still gets service on the island.

Lore: I'm a part-time bouldering instructor and can climb pretty much anything.

Lore: I almost got cast for a season of Survivor once, so I'm basically our expert on hunting and fishing on the island.

Lore: I'm quite the social butterfly. You need a phone repaired, your driveway paved, a signature forged, maybe buy some weed? I probably know a guy.

Relationship: EvilGrungus hated me for always "starting" (aka winning) arguments on their forum.

Relationship: RodentGaming49 sucks! They posted a super embarrassing video of me that went viral.

Relationship: Plunger9999 and I are gaming buddies.

everythingisfine - Main Quest

There's another character on Loveland Harbor who's trying to get in touch with you discreetly, and in your prior messages has remained anonymous. They have the sign (secret phrase) of "Marvellous island, isn't it?" and you have the countersign (response phrase) of "recent events excluded, of course". Be warned though, there is an imposter player who also knows the countersign.

When you give the proper countersign to the other player, they will let you know that this quest has been completed and you can open your envelope. The other player can choose not to let you know your quest is complete though, if they think you might be the imposter player.

Confidential! You cannot show others this envelope, though you may talk/lie about it.

everythingisfine - Main Quest 2

To complete this quest, collect 8 unique pieces of evidence (can be Clues or Testimony Slips) about the same person (not counting you).

Present your host proof of this quest's completion and get it stamped before opening.

Confidential! You cannot show others this envelope, though you may talk/lie about it.

everythingisfine - Side Quest

It's pitch black on the island minus the flimsy beam of your flashlight, everyone is panicked and there's a murderer on the loose. You'd never admit this to anyone but maybe, possibly, you might be a tiny bit scared. You know what might make you feel better? Running headlong into your fears and getting that adrenaline pumping.

Since you all moved to the island, there's been unconfirmed rumors of bears prowling Loveland Harbor; missing food, strange noises in the night, a shadow seen in the distance, that sort of thing. If you could hunt down and kill a bear, you clearly would have nothing to fear from a regular human murderer! To complete this quest, collect ALL of the following:

- Two weapons in working condition, one for each hand.
- Some trail or trace of the enormous beastie.
- Some liquid courage, really any intoxicant will do.
- A good hiding spot.

Present your host proof of this quest's completion and get it stamped before opening.
Note: this is meant to be one of the most challenging and foolhardy quests in the game. This is high-risk high-reward, and I cannot promise completing this quest will end well for your character. But, come on, you're at least a bit curious, right?
Note 2: there are some Consumable Clues that let you open a quest envelope without satisfying the prerequisites. Given the intended complexity of this quest, you're going to need two of those Consumables to open this envelope.

Hey! Alex here. I'm worried the joke won't read properly, so I feel I ought to explain myself here, lest you get confused. The other Clue in your bag has absolutely zero relation to anything going on in-game. The bit is that this is a wild-card accusation you can lob at anyone, saying "...AND they're also the Memphis Maniac!!!". Bonus note - there's a person or two whose personal details disqualify them from being the Memphis Maniac, but generally speaking you could reasonably accuse anyone of being this serial killer. Ok thanks have fun :D

This is not a Clue and cannot be traded or taken.

As evidenced by the other stuff in this envelope, you have died! Oh No!!

… it's not that big a deal honestly, you're still fully part of the game. The only thing that has changed is that you can no longer use Consumables. I'd say "you can't Extract a Confession either" but that sounds un-fun, so I won't say that. Imagine your ghost is floating around interrogating people or something lol

This is not a Clue and cannot be traded or taken.
