Evidence Locker

When you are given two Clues from someone Extracting a Confession, choose one of those Clues to deposit in the Evidence Locker. Clues cannot be viewed or taken from the Evidence Locker unless explicitly stated otherwise.

Public Information

Any Clues or Testimony added to Public Information are considered to be part of all players' Dossiers. Everything added to Public Information is permanent and cannot be removed by any game effect.

Dossiers

Your Dossier contains the information you'll use to present your final case, and the Clues/Testimony within are safe from other players. Once sealed, making any changes to your Dossier requires you to put a Clue in either the Evidence Locker or Public Information.

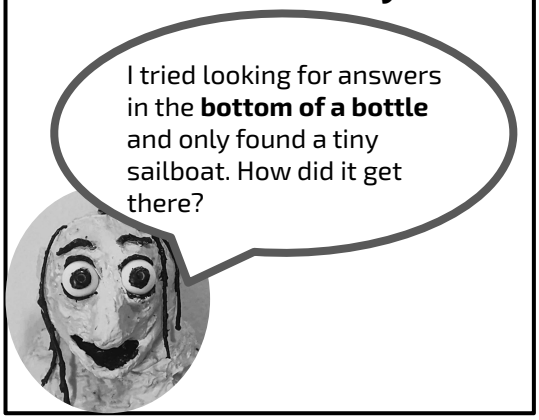

Buried Treasure?

Magic Wand	Gold Coins	Shark Bones	Broken Camera	Poisonous Mushroom
Ancient Harpoon	Old Shoes	Fake Diamonds	Car Keys	Loaded Dice
EvilGrungus' Will	Romantic Novel	⬆	Cigarette Butts	Silver Crown
Toxic Waste	Plastic Explosive	Spooky Amulet	Jazz CDs	Unicorn Horn
Canned Food	Useless Junk	Neon Katana	Glass Bottles	Dead Body

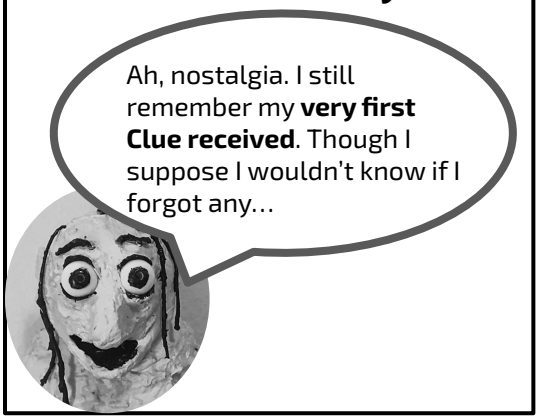

Starting at the center (facing "up"), follow the instructions from the Clue ID and "dig" at your destination.

This is your code wheel! When you encounter encoded text, you'll be looking for a 3-digit Key (the ID of the Clue the text is on is a good thing to try first). To crack the code, line up the key in the green window, with the first digit in the outer ring, second digit in the middle, etc. With the Key selected, each encoded letter is replaced with the letter below it in the wheel - so for Key 000, “Y” is replaced with “M”, “M” is replaced with “J” and “J” is replaced with “Y”. The coded text SUKI would decode to CLUE.

Because spaces are included in the wheel, underscores might be used to convey that a letter is a space. Also, “0” and “9” have the same space on the wheel.

P.S. I know that this wheel looks intimidating and that's by design (hopefully in a fun way though). Maybe find a decoding buddy if that's your style
